1st District Legislators Share Thoughts on Today's Economy & More

Summing up the current economic situation of the state before members of the Greater Vineland Chamber of Commerce, State Sen. Jeff Van Drew (D-1) labeled the times "extraordinarily challenging."

From frustration to hope Van Drew, and fellow Democratic 1st District legislators, Assemblymen Nelson Albano and Matthew Milam, addressed current topics and fielded a few questions from chamber members at the Chamber's monthly luncheon held March 19 at the Ramada Inn.

Assemblyman Nelson Albano, D-1, shares his belief that the state must not take its eyes off the troubles facing farmers as well as land use.

Assemblyman Matthew Milam, D-1, shares a laugh with members of the Greater Vineland Chamber of Commerce during their monthly luncheon.

State Sen. Jeff Van Drew, D-1, speaks to Chamber members.

First up to the podium was Albano, a lifelong Vineland resident, who gave a quick spiel before leaving for a prior commitment.

The assemblyman, who has served since 2006 and was recently appointed chairman of the Agriculture and Natural Resources Committee, said when it comes to South Jersey, eyes must not be taken off of farmers and land use.

Albano, who mentioned he was still recovering from a bout of pneumonia, took over the chairman duties after District 3 Assemblyman Doug Fisher was selected for the Secretary of Agriculture position with the state.

"We have preserved more land in the state of New Jersey than any other state," said Albano, who also serves as vice chairman of the law and public safety committee in Trenton. "We have to keep that trend going. We have to help our farmers. We don't want to lose our farms."

Albano also made mention that despite the tough economic times some businesses have been resilient, such as Swanson Hardware Supply in Vineland which was founded in 1958 by Walter and Robert Swanson.

"They've been around for so, so long," Albano said. "They still manage to work hard."

Like Gov. Jon Corzine's new Chief Counsel Bill Castner mentioned during the Chamber's February luncheon, Van Drew noted that municipalities around the state are planning to defer 50 percent of their pension payment responsibility this year as a means of dealing with their local budgets.

"But that means next year they're going to have to make a double payment," said Van Drew. "And next year's revenue picture isn't going to be significantly different from this year."

The senator, who serves as vice chairman of the Environment Committee and Community & Urban Affairs Committee, and serves on the Transportation Committee, said that the state had one of the best pension systems in the country until the state raided it for other funding purposes.

Further worrisome, says Van Drew, is that this year only one-tenth of the required amount is being placed in the fund.

Rebates have also been a hot topic in Trenton, Van Drew said.

"We need to have the rebates now, because of the economy and we haven't really truly relieved property taxes," Van Drew said.

He also criticized the rebate program's setup.

"The state takes your money, they process it, they pay people to write checks and write the checks back to you and it's your money," Van Drew explained. "And, actually, you get less back.

"There's a better way to do this: There should be a direct write off of your property taxes."

Another aspect of government bothering Van Drew is when legislators try to change tax regulations from their original intended purpose.

When certain taxes are established some act as dedicated revenue streams for a specific purpose, Van Drew said.

"For example they put in a new room tax in the hotels and motels in the state of New Jersey and it was supposed to be that regardless of what happens a certain percentage of that goes for tourism, arts, history in the state," Van Drew said. "And, the way that bill was structured, there's something in there called the poison pill. It means that if you don't use the money for the intended purpose, if you don't use that fund for tourism to stimulate those businesses you can no longer collect that room tax.

"Now you're hearing we don't have to stick with that. Well, it's going to happen with beach replenishment as well. We're supposed to set an example. If we use a poison pill we should stick with it."

Milam also touched upon the stimulus package recently approved on the Federal level.

"(There are) 21 counties in the state of New Jersey. The stimulus funds come down and they say every county is going to get some benefits," Milam said. "Funding is then announced for projects in 20 out of the 21 counties in this state. What was the county they forgot about? Cumberland County.

"So we went to the commissioner of the Department of Transportation, we went to the governor. Well, they say there are no federally approved projects in the county. I find that hard to believe."

Despite being left out, Milam, who is serving his first term and is vice chairman of the tourism and gaming committee, said a significant road improvement project has received funding through a different source: a capital program.

Milam, who also serves on the environment and solid waste committee, and the transportation, public works and independent authorities committee, said $20 million is on its way for the improvement of the intersection of routes 49 and 55.

NJMP Vintage Car Event to Feature Community Festival

The charm of Cumberland County will combine with the excitement of the New Jersey Motorsports Park's NJ Vintage Grand Prix event the weekend of May 30 & 31 at the park in Millville.

The weekend will also feature Limpert Brothers "Original Marshmallow Fluff," a staple in Cumberland County since 1926. Visitors will have the chance to stroll a vendor area of Cumberland County businesses, children can have their fun in a kid-friendly activity area, and local entertainers will keep the mood upbeat.

In addition three local charitable organizations will be on hand: The Millville Army Airfield Museum, The Wounded Warriors Foundation and The Green Flag Foundation.

Residents of Cumberland County will receive discounted tickets and, as always, children under 12 are free. Festival times are 10 a.m.-5 p.m. both days. Some of the festival events to be featured are:

Little Miss and Mr. Marshmallow Fluff Contest (weeks leading up to festival): Each of the 14 municipalities in Cumberland County will be asked to hold a Little Miss and Mr. Marshmallow Fluff contest. Parents are asked to submit a photo of their child. All photos will be on display at the event and visitors will vote for their favorite by placing change in containers next to the photo. All money collected benefits aforementioned charities.

Drive-In to Downtown Millville: On March 29 a parade of vintage cars will leave NJMP around 6 p.m. and drive to High Street in the Holly City.

Vintage is the race theme the weekend of May 30 at the New Jersey Motorsports Park in Millville. NJMP also hosts a community fair the same weekend.

Ice Cream Naming Contest: Pearl Giordano, Limpert Brothers president, has ice cream manufacturer contacts, which will yield two to three flavors using products from Limpert Brothers created exclusively for the festival. During the day guests will vote for their favorite flavor.

Iron Chef-Style Challenge: Head-to-head event pits two chefs against each other in a 60-minute timed cooking competition and churn out as many plates as possible with specified ingredients at their cooking station.

Visit www.njmp.com for more info. Vending space is $50 for 10-foot by 10-foot area during festival hours.
